Job title / Grade: Consultant General Surgeon s.i. Hepatobiliary Surgery and Liver Transplantation

Reports to: Reports and is accountable to the relevant Clinical Director and Departmental Clinical Lead.

Department Information:

The National Liver Transplant Programme commenced here in St Vincent's University hospital in 1993 with the National Pancreas-Kidney Transplant programme commencing in 2016. The workload for both these transplant programmes and the multi-organ procurement requirement has expanded enormously since then. Our Directorate and Programmes are supported by National Cancer Control Programme (NCCP) through the National Pancreatic Cancer Centre and a National Centre for Primary Liver Cancers. Organ Donation & Transplant Ireland (ODTI) also provides high level support in developing our organ donation rates in Ireland.

While the transplant programmes has expanded to account for the evolving spectrum of liver and pancreatic diseases over the last 30 years, transplantation rates in Ireland remain less than half that of many European countries. Changes in patterns of alcohol related liver disease, non-alcoholic steatohepatitis (NASH), increasing indications for transplantation for primary liver cancer and increased incidence of diabetes in addition to an ageing population suggest that the current transplant programme will require restructuring to increase capacity if it is to meet future demands. International best practice includes use of DCD organs, routine use of organ perfusion technologies including regional perfusion, and living donors to increase conversion from donor offer to transplantation. This post will focus on addressing these deficits and introduce a multi-organ retrieval process that aims to develop a DCD programme with the proposed organ perfusion device.
